I met Joe at Twinsfest 07 after a 5 hour wait in line. The line cut off just a few people behind me. I had knee surgery scheduled 2 days after Twinsfest so when I got to talk to Joe, I told him I was having surgery on the same knee he did and had the same injury (though not from baseball!). He asked "do you have the same knee surgeon that I did?" It was adorable.

We would be happy to meet you and have so much fun. My mom also said that if you have any food preferences, the menu is still open for adjustment (we plan on having hot dogs & cracker jacks). I absolutly love your page. BUT there is one thing that is kinda wrong... It says in your "Say its so, Joe!" section that he is 6'4. Well this year he is actually still growing! He is 6'5. I know its small but i just think its amazing that a 24 yr old man is still growing! Its even more amazing that he is a catcher, a damn good one at that. But its just an FYI you dont have to change it or anything. Thanks -Mandi

09/09/07 Lexi Blaine, MN writes:

Hi joe! Oh My Gosh! I miss seeing you play. I hope your hamstring gets better cuz baseball isn't the same without some MauerPauer Am I right? hahaha. well show those other baseball players what your made of and get better soon! love your biggest,coolest and most supportive fan,,, Lexi

09/09/07 Earl Lancaster, MN writes:

Hi Joe; I just want to say I hope you can stay as a catcher as long as you want too despite what the papers say about you switching positions to 3rd base. Chris Heintz and Redmond and Morales are good, but I truly believe that you are the man for the position as catcher for years to come. It sucks that your not in the lineup, but I know that you will get back in the game next year strong as you have been in 06. Just remember that all of us as fans are going to support you for as long as you play the game. Earl Actually this comment is for Mike Redmond since he doesn't have the fan club presence of Joe Mauer. Joe, Red Dog is looking for a T shirt Slogan to replace the Smell 'Em thing of last year. It is HIS JOB to come up with a new slogan. Here is a suggestion Slogan: Here we come again! The visual is a rotating pointer finger like catchers use when preparing to repeat signs. Instead of standing on base doing the nostril thing..players could do the rotating finger thing to indicate a repeat. Cool Dude!

Joe I think you are the most patient batter I've seen and you are my favorite MN Twin player. I do have a few questions, hope you don't mind:

1. Why do you not swing at the first pitch, in most cases it's a ball right down the middle?
2. I've noticed that you make the pitcher at least throw you 2-3 balls before taking a pitch, may I ask why? Are you looking for location, a certain pitch?

I admire your patience and ease at the plate and wondered if it's all part of the "at bat". I have children that play ball (softball & baseball) and I would like them to be a little more selective on their swings. Would you recommend your approach to a young player?

Thanks for you time, Majella R.

All baseball player should be like that. I want to go to the autograph party, but if it's anything near as hectic as Twinsfest there's no way I'd possibly get an autograph from you. But that's OK. I know I will get one eventually. I have a whole Minnesota Twins display case in my house and I'd like to add your autograph to it. My dad and I collect Wheaties boxes. What is your family like?

What is it like to play in front of so many people? Does it ever make you nervous?

Thank you so much for all of your help. You are my most favorite player ever!!! I hope that you always stay a twin!!!

Hi Brandon, My name is Marty and I am the president of Joe's fan club. I have an agreement with Joe that I will not forward any type of request to him. I hope you can understand how swamped Joe is with e-mail and traveling even in the off season. I think it's awesome that you would do a report on Joe for school and I thought since I can't get Joe maybe I can help a little. In March of 2004 when Joe was about to make his spring training debut I decided to start a Yahoo group and Joe's fan club. Since that time I have archived a LOT of messages and articles that I found on the internet. Many of them also appear on the fan club website under articles and quotes but a lot of the links are now broken and gone forever. One of the questions you asked of Joe was; 'What is your family like?'. I can think of two articles right off the top of my head that can give you a really good idea about Joe's family and how close he is to them all. The first is about Joe and his mom in message #17 and the other is about the 2006 trip to the All Star game in message #1621. Message #1655 is about the sideburn giveaway, etc. Click this link to get started: I hope I've been able to be of some help and please let me know if I can be of further assistance. Marty Hinrichs

Hi Joe-- This is more of a story than a question. I'm a mother of 3 children my oldest Melissa goes to Macalester, this past summer when she wasn't working or playing soccer she would come home for the good meal and use of the washer & drier. When she was home she watched twins games, and me a mother trying to spend as much time as possible with the children as they start leaving the nest would sit & watch the game with her. In the past while surf in the channels I would never think of stoppin at a twins game. But I watched with her & enjoyed it greatly. When she went back to school I continued watching the games & kept her updated with texting. I want to thank you and all the rest of the team for making me a fan. AWESOME, AWESOME year. Melissa is a very big fan of yours and the team. She went to as many games as a college student can afford, but has never had the opportunity to meet any of you. School starts late this month, if you ever get the opportunity to hang out at Macalester she knows Joe Wertz just ask him to meet Missy. Just tell her that her mom sent you, that should cover me for several birthday presents!!!!
